Counterfeit Bonds and Notes

NEW YORK, Sept. 2 Mr Denny, Chairman of the Governing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange said to-day he was confident that no other bonds than those of the Buffalo New York and Erie and the New York Central had been counterfeited The Treasurer of the New Jersey Central road says he has neither seen nor heard of any forged bonds of that company The Secretary of the Western Union Telegraph Company makes a similar statement with regard to the bonds of that company

Messrs Haskins and Brodie to-day temporarily suspended business It is now understood that advances of this firm to swindlers amounted to $40 000

To-day another counterfeit $500 greenback was received at the Sub Treasury, making thirteen received since Saturday It is believed at the Sub-Treasury that the counterfeit bills come from the West and that there are but few in circulation in New York The bills have been examined by experts of the [illegible] Note Company and pronounced by them to be the best counterfeit bills that ever came under their notice. George W Masler, of the Sub-Treasury says the paper on which the forged bills are printed is lighter than that of genuine He also says that the face of the bills cannot be distinguished from the genuine, but that the letters on the [illegible] are tinged with green where they should be perfectly white and that a blue tint peculiar to the genuine is not perceptible in the counterfeit.

A SAVANT'S DEATH

SAD SCENES ATTENDANT ON THE DECEASE OF M. CHASLES—ABANDONED BY FRIENDS AND DOCTORS.

The Pall Mall Gazette summarizes from the Paris Figaro a melancholy account of the death of the savant Philarete Chasles at Venice. During the night his niece, Mme Schultz, and his grand niece heard him moaning and went to his room They found he had been attacked by Asiatic cholera, and immediately sent for the doctors, who at first sight saw that there was nothing to be done. They ordered some iced champagne and went away Once it was shown that M Chasles had been attacked by cholera, an attempt was made to oblige Mme. Schultz to leave the sick man's chamber, where she was endeavoring to warm his hands and feet. She resisted this order in the most energetic way, and half an hour afterward an honest looking gen d'arme arrived and took up his post at the door All communication with the rest of the world was cut off and Mme Schultz could not even obtain the permission to embrace her daughter, who was sobbing outside the door She was a prisoner and neither tears nor entreaties could move the gen d'arme, who did not appear to enjoy his post His disconsolate air in fact touched even the dying man who exclaimed "If Figaro were aware of this! a sick man abandoned by his doctors and guarded by a gen d'arme After a violent seizure poor M Chasles became more calm, and wishing to get up left his bed, and fell on the floor Mme Schultz, herself very ill, tried in vain to raise him, and implored the aid of the gen d'arme, who was looking on without moving "Madame," replied this functionary "It is quite enough to be shut up here I do not wish to catch the cholera" However on being promised a reward, the man took up the mattress, and using it as a protection, lifted M Chasles up and got him into an arm chair and then resumed his post Several times the dying man murmured, "Air air" as Goethe demanded "Light, light" and after ten hours of suffering he expired When all was over Mme Schultz left the room but in the evening she desired to return and see once more the remains of her uncle But the gen d'arme, who had been inside of the room, was now outside, and refused her permission to enter However, Mme Schultz managed to get in by a side door, but when she desired to leave again she was once more imprisoned and there she was kept for thirty hours although the body was in an advanced state of decomposition At last the undertakers came, dressed in red and wearing black masks, and the body was removed Only one friend a young Venetian could obtain permission to follow the coffin and see where the dead man was buried Mme Schultz wished to take her departure from Venice, but she was informed that she could not leave for five days for fear she should carry the cholera with her She managed however in the end to get away in two days As she was in the act of leaving her hotel the terrible gen d'arme stepped up to her and said "Pardon Madam you have forgotten your umbrella

CURIOUS METEORIC STONE —J A Anderson whose ranch is about ten miles from town, brought to this office a very curious specimen of rock which was dug up near his place and is supposed to have fallen from a meteor It appears that on Sunday night his oldest boy was riding near the edge of the farm about 8 o'clock in the evening when a flash of light passed over his head and there was a rattling sound in the trees near by and a heavy thud in the ground Next morning they proceeded to the spot and found a place in the ground where the upheaval of fresh dirt showed that some heavy body had fallen The leaves and branches of a tree near by were singed and splintered clearly showing the path of some heated object On digging about eight feet they came upon a stone about twelve pounds in weight which still retained an intense heat and the ground was hot around it Water was poured upon it, and it apparently cooled off and was put in a cart to take to the house when the latent heat was apparently liberated and it set fire to the cart Placed in a tank of water it caused it to boil and did not lose its heat until late in the afternoon The stone is apparently composed of a mass of heavy metal which has at one time existed in a fused state The stone is now to be seen in the [illegible] office and will be sent to the Smithsonian Institute—Memphis Appeal [illegible]

THE CALIFORNIA ELECTION!

San Francisco Endorses Booth!

Triumph of the Anti-Monopolists Conceded!

A Close Fight in Sacramento!

Incomplete Returns from Other Parts of the State!

SAN FRANCISCO Sept 3 —The election [illegible] generally passed off very quietly There were but few drunken men and few disturbances The [illegible] still [illegible] the returns to-night The estimate by [illegible] of the city is between 22,000 and 24,000 Judgments differ as to the result It is generally conceded however that the anti Monopoly ticket has won This is only guess work for it is impossible to distinguish tickets and most voters went to the polls with prepared ballots The result on Chief of Police will be very close The vote is smaller throughout the city than was anticipated

SAN FRANCISCO, September 3 —The total vote in the city is 26,307, as far as reported to the present time, (11 P. M) with three precincts to hear from which will probably swell the total to 27 000 There are no returns from any ward, and there will be none to-night owing to necessary slowness in the count All persons concede the election of the anti monopoly ticket with scarcely an exception although there are no returns on which to base a calculation

A dispute occurred just after closing, at the Third Ward to-night between John Gallagher and a man named Jaynes known as Johnny Stickeen Gallagher in an angry manner approached Jaynes when the latter drew a pistol and shot Gallagher in the face the ball penetrating the brain Jaynes fled Gallagher was carried to a drug store and has just expired Jaynes is not yet arrested Gallagher was a ship caulker Jaynes is known as an Irish Italian

Jaynes who shot Gallagher is under arrest He says he went to the Third Ward polls to work for the anti-monopoly ticket when he was attacked and beaten by Supervisor Kenny He started to go away when several men amongst whom was Gallagher attacked him Gallagher struck him in the face when he drew a pistol and fired Gallagher was unmarried but he has a sister and mother in the city

A young man named Whitney took a pistol to-night and commenced a series of flourishes with the weapon, when it exploded, sending a bullet through his hand, tearing it terribly

Frank A Dumont was arrested for unfolding a ballot within the 100 feet limit of the Tenth Ward

Patrick Connolly was arrested in the Seventh Ward for attempting to vote on the name of another man Felony is charged against him

There will be no returns from the election before to-morrow

Interior California.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 3 —The election to-day passed off in an exceedingly orderly manner No disturbance of any kind took place and considering the amount of free whisky available but very little intoxication was apparent The arrangements made by the Chief of Police for maintaining order in each precinct were admirable, and every attempt to get up a disturbance was instantly nipped in the bud, although but very few arrests were made A very large vote was polled amounting to about 4,000 in the city The railroad party used every exertion and the taxpayers were equally energetic The Democrats as a party were almost wholly ignored, only two or three of their candidates making any effort and that being directed solely to their own individual election There were about twenty five different tickets in the field and it is thought that but few straight tickets have been voted One ticket which is Republican for the Legislature and Democratic for city and county officers, seemed to meet with considerable favor A large number of absentees from the city but whose names are still on the Great Register and who were brought here from all quarters by the Railroad party voted In nearly every instance they were challenged and had to be sworn previous to depositing their votes. In the city a majority of from 500 to 600 is conceded to the Republicans though they claim from 800 to 1 200 The tax payers are, however confident that the vote in the county will more than equal their loss in the city and express themselves as satisfied of the success of their whole ticket Last night tickets were freely distributed through the city, and many came to the polls to-day with their tickets prepared so that it is impossible to judge how they voted The count is proceeding but it has not yet progressed far enough to enable any idea to be formed of the result In some of the precincts the straight tickets are being sorted out and the straight Republican tickets tallied first The last tally up to 1 P M will be telegraphed, but owing to the manner of counting (as mentioned above) will give but little idea of the final result The count will probably not be completed before noon to-morrow The county precincts cannot be heard from before to-morrow [The instructions to keep W U offices open until 1 A M applied solely to California offices Our reports are up to 11 20 P M —ED]

YREKA Sept 3 —Election passed off quietly though both parties worked hard and earnestly Six precincts give Irwin (Dem) for Senator 65 majority

Gresler independent Assemblyman 48 Swain independent, for Sheriff, 53 majority Brown Democrat for Clerk is elected by a large majority The rest of the Democratic ticket is largely ahead The result in precincts to hear from is doubtful and the general result will not be known until full returns are received

LIVERMORE, Sept 3 —The body of a man was seen hanging from a tree this morning on the ranch of Martin Mendenhall a half mile from here The deceased was about 24 years old and was named Gustave Nopck He had been sick four or five years, which it is supposed led to the rash act An inquest was held and a verdict rendered in accordance with the above facts

Mr [illegible] is the pleasant sounding appellation to a scientific gentleman who recently astonished the American Association which met recently in Portland Maine with the following remarks on the mammoth

The discovery of the mammoth in Siberia in the deep gorges of the Aldon mountains near the Lena river which was lately published as having been made by a scientific Russian named Cheriton Batchancatshuck who narrates to have been close to five living animals twelve feet in height eighteen feet in length with projecting tusks four feet long and a full description of the color of skin and [illegible] habits has excited some interest in my mind I think it worthy of an inquiry whether the mammoth of the past century period the Elephas Primigenius has survived during this century in Siberia or the [illegible] the Lena can have any relation to this discovery Thousands of [illegible] have been found [illegible] preserved skin and thousands of tusks are to this day brought to England for the use of the turner to make handles for canes and umbrellas and having belonged to animals of nearly the same dimensions as those described by the Russian who has been rewarded by the Russian Government with an additional freedom It cannot therefore [illegible] statement having been vouched for by a scientific witness

The conductors and brakemen of the freight trains on the western division of the New York Central Railroad have struck for advanced wages in accordance with the promises made to them a month since.

THE NEW SCHOOL BOOKS

We have a school law intended to secure uniformity of text books throughout the public schools of Oregon I do not know who originated this law and pressed it upon the Legislature of Oregon but I believe that Libby and Swett of San Francisco could tell me California was hoodwinked into passing a similar law and after enduring several years of plunder abandoned the costly experiment The State Superintendent's name was used in connection with transactions that caused him to retire into the book business California has not seen fit to recall him to public life and whether Oregon shall have reason to be thankful for his retirement remains to be seen I do not doubt that there are hundreds of the [illegible] who assume that this is an excellent law but until I hear some better reasons offered for it than there has been I shall assume that most of its advocates are mere echoes of those who could if they would give better reasons for their approval.

We have in the schools of Astoria the best books that we have been able to find There is uniformity in our classes and that is all the uniformity that can be of any profit to us If some other schools have not uniformity, that is their fault but we do not want to suffer for it We would like to have the privilege of reading the books that we think are the best This feeling harmonizes with our ideas of American liberty We like to choose our own hats and boots, and buy them where we please and get them as cheaply as we can Do you think you know better than the State Board what books ought to be used? We answer unhesitatingly—yes, certainly for this school we know better we know all its circumstances We know every book in this school by personal inspection We know the name of the author, and what and how he teaches, but very often we do not know the name of the publisher and his terms for first introduction We never adopt or recommend a book that we have not examined Can one half the State Board say as much? The Board have perhaps selected good books one thing is certain they have secured in a very great degree the full benefits of first introduction The leading houses of San Francisco say, we will get the books but most of them were never used on the Pacific coast To recommend text books was no part of the business of a State Board It was a good plan to ring in a certain set of books and its success indicates its adoption If the State Board could in this off hand manner select the best series of books for Oregon the method certainly had the recommendation of being very simple and easy

But if an unknown man might presume to express an opinion he would say that some pains should have been taken to find out what books were most generally in use in the State and where a book in use was as good or nearly as good, as any other it should have been given the preference. The method adopted was well calculated to mislead any County Superintendent who was not quite familiar with the text books in present use It was calculated to get the suffrage of all those whose natural indolence made them prefer a list ready made to hand, to the labor and care necessary to construct one The most of them never saw the books they recommended and never saw a man who had Of course the ignorant man was pleased to turn over to others the responsibility that he felt they were much better qualified to assume than he was himself? And even those men whose intelligence ought to be a security for independent action are sometimes strangely taken with a weakness in the back and stand forth as attractive to the common eye as a Swiss woman with a goitre And hence I say that the plan of Libby and Swett was ingenious The man who originated it understood school matters perfectly Was it not Swett? He is an old head in the State Superintendency business

What advantages are claimed for the law?

1st. It is economical

2d It prevents change of text books

3d It secures uniformity in all the schools of the State and continues that uniformity four years

What were the mistakes of the old system? It was expensive, for every new teacher introduced new books And every change of books was an expense to the patrons of the schools There was no uniformity in the schools it was no uncommon thing to find three or four different text books in the same study When a pupil moved from one district to another he had to get new books All of these difficulties are overcome by the new law

I will take up the points as they are put down here although they run into each other in such a way that I may not have to discuss more than the three points numbered

As to the expense There are about five hundred people in Astoria and the population of Oregon by the census of 1870, is a little more than ninety thousand. We will have to pay for new books not less than five hundred dollars We lose books worth as much as the new ones—another five hundred dollars Our merchants have about five or six hundred dollars worth of unsaleable books on their shelves for which they will not receive half price Now, this is an average of two and a half dollars apiece for every inhabitant This gives the snug little sum of two hundred and twenty five thousand dollars, required to launch this new list into the schools of the State No one year ever saw ten per cent of that sum purchased in Oregon It cannot be doubted by any one that the subsequent cost of the books will be enhanced in consequence of the monopoly that is now enjoyed by the publishers whose books have been chosen For experience has shown that all stipulations are but cobwebs against the greed of persons invested by law with special privileges and monopolies With no competition it is certain that directly or indirectly the people will have to pay more for their school books This uniformity established at a dead loss of thousands can be continued only by perpetual tribute Against any evils of diversity of text books therefore must be set the undeniable fact of a reduction in average cost, in consequence of the natural and sharp competition of publishers when there is no artificial aid and the matter is submitted as it ought to be entirely to the laws of trade

As to the second point that the law prevents change of text books for four years we answer that point may or it may not be an advantage It may be the means of perpetuating a mischief It may impose poor books at high prices upon the people and deprive even the State authorities of power to remedy the evil As to the third point the uniformity which is so much desired it will if continued prove a curse to the State The tendency of all school systems is to run to a dead level of sameness We have to deal with children too much in the aggregate we cannot give scope enough to their individuality We cannot sufficiently adapt those particular means which we find and know are suited to particular cases This is only practicable in very small schools or in private instruction This has a tendency to respectable mediocrity You cannot bring out the best and strongest points in a child's mind unless in some degree you study his mental moral and physical wants and needs As to the change of [illegible] change of text books by teachers the answer may be made that no teacher should change a book without good and sufficient reason, and any one who makes unnecessary changes is unfit to be a teacher At the same time we will state that circumstances may arise and often do arise which make a change of some text books in a school very desirable

I will give some examples which may not have much weight as they are not in harmony with this popular theory but trust to every teacher's and child's experience for their vindication We will suppose a very common occurrence a teacher takes charge of a class for the first time, he finds they have been through the book that they know much of it by rote but that they do not understand the subject they have not gone deeper than the rule and found the principle upon which the rule was based they have assimilated nothing their knowledge is adhesive but not cohesive; when the brain hardens it will drop off But they think they understand the subject and will not go over that book again What shall be done? The practical teacher says give them a new book and as you go over attract their attention to the difference of statement methods &c and the class will reap the benefit of both Again, take a class through an arithmetic or a grammar, in a thorough manner and the exercise books of its numbers contain solutions of all the examples in the arithmetic—the proper analysis and parsing of the grammatical exercises a full key to the false syntax While that class remain in school a careful teacher would rather select other books for his following class lest studying should degenerate into copying And here let me say that when pupils of the same attainments are in the same class and have the same text book that is sufficient uniformity Nothing valuable in practice can be gained by any greater uniformity And now, as to the moving pupil, the change of books was sometimes a benefit, sometimes a loss If he had been well taught and had confidence in the books and liked them it was a loss. But, if he escaped from old ruts, and the routine of books and book methods of which he had become weary, to fresh books which presented the subject in a new and attractive light he was the gainer So we assert, that if a teacher and the directors of a school have a book that they do not like, and they think they can get one better adapted to their school and its wants, and the people are willing and able to make the change they should be free to do what the welfare of their own particular school requires and there should be no official obstacle to their doing so The diversity of books in many schools contradicts the charge of sweeping changes by teachers but it is perhaps true that some schools need a more uniform system But time and better knowledge would have corrected this, or a well considered change might have improved the system of these schools without leveling everything to the ground Yours THULAH

The final object of the Commissioners visit was not consummated, owing to the fact that they were unable to meet all the Indians however another meeting has been arranged for October 1st at Fort Hall where the Commissioners expect to be able to meet all the Indians of the Fort Hall Reservation and close up matters to their satisfaction and that of our Government and the people of our Territory

An Avalanche (Jackson) special, of August 29th, says the Republican Convention nominated W. H Globe for Auditor, G E. Harris for Attorney and General T W Cardoza (colored) for Superintendent of Education The resolutions adopted express the utmost confidence and faith in Republican principles, and opposition to fostering monopolies at the expense of the masses Honesty, capacity and fidelity should be the test of political preferment They oppose the assumption of the payment of bonds to railroads or other corporations, and declare they recognize no distinctions as to the existing laws between black and white children in the public and other educational institutions, and indorse the administration of the Government A resolution to indorse Kellogg's Government of Louisiana was received with such demonstrations of hostility that it was withdrawn. Gen Ames was introduced and made a short speech saying, among other things that if elected Governor and during his term any bill looking to the payment of the repudiated debt, or re-opening the question in any way, should come up, he would most certainly veto it. Much enthusiasm prevailed, and the Convention adjourned sine die

VENTILATION IN THE SENATE CHAMBER.—A very important improvement has just been completed at the Capitol building in an air-duct, ten feet in width, conducting into the fan-room of the Senate wing It is expected by this means that the Senate Chamber can, without difficulty, be henceforth always supplied with fresh air The air that passes through this duct will be cooled by sprays of ice water. The supply of fresh air to the Senate wing has always been a source of trouble, as the smoke from the boilers, although carried to the top of the building, was not wafted away, particularly in cloudy weather, but drawn down by the immense fan below and carried through the Senate Chamber and the committee rooms This now is remedied by the air-duct, which opens on the bank of the lower terrace The opening of this air-duct will be handsomely faced with granite and protected by an iron grating

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE® NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

The Daily Oregonian.

THURSDAY MORNING, SEPT 4, 1873.

TAKE YOUR OWN PRESCRIPTION, DOCTOR.

The Bulletin says if it had as bad an opinion of the Republican party as the OREGONIAN seems to have, it would leave the party. From which it is apparent the Bulletin still confounds the Republican party with the Holladay-Hipple ring. If we entertained as bad an opinion of the party as we do of the ring, we should not be likely to wait for an invitation to leave it. It is because we entertain a better opinion of the party than of the selfish Portland clique, that we have constantly and earnestly entreated its old members not to allow their disgust at the selfishness and corruption of a ring, composed mostly of renegades from the Democracy, and embracing scarcely a person who has not been long known as a political mercenary, to cause them to stand still and let the organization pass entirely out of the hands of the people by their own default. For this we shall labor still, and in this we have confidence that we shall yet be successful.

But let us compare the Bulletin's practice with its high-sounding declaration of principles, and see how they tally. The Bulletin says Mr. John Hipple, U. S. Senator, with an alias, has lived a life that no virtuous person can call other than reprehensible, and it speaks of his conduct as "faults and follies, not to call them by harsher names." Such is the language that paper holds about the man to whose patronage it owes its existence to-day. When such language comes from such a source, what must be the actual facts stated in plain English. And yet the Bulletin says the party will sustain Hipple, with all his crimes upon him, as its highest exponent and representative, and the Bulletin will support the party and does support Hipple. Wouldn't you better modify that virtuous declaration of principles a little, Mr. Bulletin? Say that if you entertained the bad opinions of the party which your other declarations indicate you do entertain, you would leave it unless it gave you a fat office. Put it thus, and people may believe you speak truly.

The difference between the Bulletin and the OREGONIAN appears to be about this: They both believe Hipple is a bad man. The OREGONIAN believes the Republicans generally are not so bad as Hipple, and it therefore refuses to forsake them. The Bulletin believes the Republicans are as bad as Hipple, and it would leave the party, if it were not for the fat things that are to be got by co-operating with the worst elements of the organization.

We shall see whether the whitewashing resolution which the Bulletin promises to our perturbed Senator with an alias will be forthcoming when the Convention sits. In other words, we shall then know whether the ring in order to sustain themselves and concoct up a case of crime unparalleled in the history of public men in America, will [illegible] the Republican party, and whether a majority of the Convention will unite with them in this action. The responsibility of such a step is with the Convention, [illegible] the result with the people.

CO-OPERATIVE IMMIGRATION.

The advantages of the colonization plan of immigration, recently inaugurated in the settling up of the northwestern part of the United States, have been demonstrated in the relief of the colonists from many of the hardships and inconveniences incident to building up a home on the extreme frontier. Nowhere is the mutual benefit of co-operation more sensibly felt than in the labor and toil of bringing the forest and wilderness into subjection to the wants of civilization. We have just read an extended account of the colonial settlements in the valley of the Red River of the North, from which it appears that there are now several towns of considerable magnitude surrounded by a large and flourishing agricultural community, where less than two years ago the ax was not heard in the forest and the sod of the prairies lay unbroken. The towns of Glyndon, Moorhead and Murado, all places of considerable importance are the creatures of these colonies of immigrants from Europe—from Germany, Scotland, England and the Scandinavian peninsula. These people have already surrounded themselves with many of the appointments and appliances of old and established communities. They have scarcely known for a moment the privations that are ordinarily encountered by the immigrant during the first years of his frontier life. Schools and churches, roads and ferries, laws, and a regular and orderly administration of social affairs were all in full operation almost before the immigrant realized the novelty of his situation, or had time to think of the hardships it might entail. And now, these settlements, which form the body of the county of Clay in the State of Minnesota, number several thousands of souls, and are as well prepared to meet the rigors of the winter, to take advantage of the fluctuations of the produce market, to educate their children and enjoy their homes as almost any community of fifteen years growth in the great Northwest. Such has been the effect of united, systematic effort put forth upon the plan of mutual help and protection.

A CHEERING OUTLOOK

A gentleman who has just returned from a tour of the entire Willamet Valley informs us that but little grain has been injured by the August rains, and that the farmers are greatly encouraged by the large crops, the successful harvesting, and the prospect of getting their produce to the seaboard without having to submit to the extortions of the railway corporation, which consumed so large a share of the proceeds of their labor last year. The opening of the Willamet river to free navigation through the locks at Oregon City, and the putting on of a line of boats to compete with those belonging to the railway company, have reduced the cost of transportation from the warehouses up the valley to Portland about fifty per cent. This reduction is all clear profit to the farmer. So the farmers are reported as feeling very well satisfied with the prospect for returns for their year's labor. The whole community has cause for rejoicing in these facts, for the prosperity of the farming interests insures that of all other industries.

A RISING CITY.

At the point where the Northern Pacific Railway crosses the Missouri river is located the town of Bismarck. It is a new town, of course, and has the ways of a new town; but its newspaper, the Bismarck Tribune, shows that the place is rapidly assuming metropolitan proportions and pretentions. The advertising columns of the Tribune indicate that all branches of business are pushing ahead on no small scale, and the people of the town believe they have found the distributing point, and the concentrating point for all the region round about. They claim that in a short time, Bismarck will be the largest town between St. Paul and the Pacific Coast. They have a thousand miles of river navigation centering at their city, besides the advantages that must arise from the railway traffic both east and west.

If the present is an earnest of the future prosperity of the new-born city, it would be rash to deny the correctness of the reasoning by which its prospective greatness is proved. For instance, during the first four weeks after the road was completed to this point—the four weeks ending about the 10th of July—there were laid down at Bismarck, by rail, twelve hundred tons of freight, the aggregate charges upon which amounted to $30,000. This is a pretty fair beginning, we should say, for an inland town.

We acknowledge receipt of the prospectus of a new paper to be first published in Baker City on or about October 1st, 1873, by R. B. M. Boyd, who is to be at once editor and proprietor. The publisher pledges himself "to publish a paper not in the interest of any man or clique, but in the interests of the whole people of that beautiful valley." His platform is tersely stated: "We believe in voting for honest men for office, and shall advocate the election of none other, neither for county nor State." He is a Democrat and "cannot be bought." The sheet will be Democratic "in the strictest sense" and will keep pace with the progress of the age. If the publisher shall live up to these promises, he will make a journal worthy the patronage of the people of Eastern Oregon. We wish success to the new enterprise.

It will be remembered that several days ago our dispatches chronicled the suicide of Hon. P. Sawyer, Member of Congress from Wisconsin. Philetus won't stay dead, as the following, from the Chicago Tribune of the 22d inst. indicates:

The "late Philetus Sawyer, M. C." to whom the Evening Journal and the Times of this city devoted their obituary talent yesterday, is in astonishingly good health for a suicide. He left Eau Claire yesterday with no trace visible of the eight gashes in his throat with which, according to the Times, he took his own life. The origin of the report of his suicide was in the mistake of a telegraph operator, who, in chronicling Mr. Sawyer's arrival at Eau Claire and the suicide of a man named Thompson, got the two things badly mixed.

We notice in the Boston Advertiser an obituary on Professor William Russell, the eminent elocutionist and popular instructor, who died on Saturday, August 16th, at his home in Lancaster, Mass. Professor Russell was born in Glasgow, Scotland, April 28th, 1793. He had lived in the United States during the past 54 years. He was instructor of the elocution class of the Boston Lyceum for many years, was for three years editor of the American Journal of Education, and also prepared many text-books for schools. Professor Russell had long been known as a thorough and accomplished elocutionist.

The dispatches indicate that the tax-payers ticket has been elected in San Francisco. This gives Gov. Booth a send off with seven votes in any event and fourteen against any other Republican. It is a triumph of patriotism and honesty over trickery and corruption. In many of the interior counties there is no opposition to Booth, the popular feeling against rings and ring politics being so strong the railway ring durst not bring candidates into the field.

A VENERABLE NEWSPAPER.

The Washington Chronicle of August 21st has this:

The Baltimore American celebrated its centennial anniversary yesterday. The office was handsomely decorated with flags, the coat of arms of the State, &c.

It also prints an illustrated supplement with Baltimore town in 1773, and a picture of its first office.

Friday, August 20, 1773, the first number of the Maryland Journal and Baltimore Advertiser was issued. At that date Baltimore had less than 500 houses, and less than five thousand population.

A complete history of the American, valuable as it is interesting, is given in yesterday's issue, and in addition a fac simile of its first number accompanies it. To modern newspaper men this is very interesting, and, when the means of communication at that time are considered, it really contains a good deal of fresh news. For instance, it has European advices as late as June 17, 1773; New York news of August 12, and Philadelphia news of August 11. It has nearly a column advertisement from Geo. Washington, dated Mount Vernon, July 15, 1773, having reference to land patents of his "20,000 acres of land on the Ohio and Great Kanawha." The following advertisement is copied in full, not only as a specimen of the literature of that day, but as an interesting historical reminiscence:

Prince George's County, near Queen Ann 1773.

RAN away from the Subscriber, some time in December, 1772, Negro PRINCE, a tall, slim fellow, has several hacks in his forehead; he was taken up at Susquehannah Lower Ferry, but made his escape, and is often seen in the neighborhood. Whoever takes up the said Negro, and secures him in goal, so that the owner may get him again shall have FIVE POUNDS reward, or if brought home, TEN POUNDS reward, and reasonable charges paid by

RICHARD BENNET HALL.

Only thirteen years ago similar advertisements might have been seen in Southern newspapers.

The history of the American discloses the fact that Miss Mary Katharine Goddard was its "ostensible printress and editress" in 1775, and that her first editorial was published as far back as February, 1774, so far as we have authentic dates the first editorial by a woman in America, and she continued in full charge of the paper until the 1st of January, 1784.

HONORS TO A YOUNG CALIFORNIAN.—The award of a gold medal by the Munich Art Academy to J. D. Strong, Jr., the young artist of Oakland, is an honor of which California as a State may justly feel proud, for the medal stamps him as the most proficient artist in a class of one hundred and thirty-two pupils. His drawings were highly complimented by Cowlbach, the eminent composer, and Pelitz, the famous painter and instructor—professional gentleman whose influence and advice will be of great advantage to the young genius. Strong has passed the examination for the life school after only two and a half months' study in the Antique class, an advancement almost without precedent in the annals of the Academy. It will be remembered that Strong never received any instruction in art prior to his arrival at Munich and that the generosity of Oakland gentlemen enabled him to avail himself of the facilities of an art education found only in a European academy. Every one acquainted with the circumstances of his case will be pleased to learn that he is succeeding so finely and is full of hope.—S. F. Bulletin.

WHO IS STANWOOD?

A HERO OF THE RELIEF OF LUCKNOW IN A NEW ROLE—CONFIDENCE GAME WITH MEAGRE RESULTS.

Under this caption the Chicago Tribune thus discourses concerning a person who, for a year or more past and until very recently, was in Portland, and generally known as Captain Stanwood:

About two weeks since a distinguished stranger arrived in Chicago, and took up his abode in a boarding-house on Wabash avenue. Armed with letters of introduction to some of our prominent business men, he commenced "doing" Chicago. Representing himself as an underwriter of the "English Lloyds," he busied himself with ships and statistics of commerce. Only thirty-six years of age, his adventures, as related by himself, were very interesting. According to his own account, at the age of nineteen he was master of an East Indiaman, participated as an American in the Crimean War, was present at all the principal engagements, and laid the groundwork of his fortune by carrying contraband of war for the British Government. Returning to England as master of a vessel, he carried the "Black Watch" (Highlanders) and other troops to India. In Calcutta, leaving his ship, he, with 1,000 other seamen, volunteered and marched to the relief of Lucknow. Being shot through the lungs and otherwise desperately wounded by bayonet and sabre cuts, he returned to England, received the thanks of the Queen, was decorated by his sovereign with the "Star of India," and with his large share of "loot," retired for a time from active life and married. Accepting a position in the service of "Lloyds," he was soon again in the East. Thence he went to Portland, Oregon, where, with his immense wealth, he controlled for a season the grain market and reaped a rich reward. Being of a benevolent disposition, he was willing that others not so fortunate should share his wealth. Being part owner of a silk and velvet factory in Yokohama, Japan, he had a valuable lot of the choicest fabrics of that wonderful country in bond in the Chicago Custom House, out of which if a certain party paid the duty, only $300, he alleged they could make a small fortune. Such was the story of this remarkable Englishman.

Having been many years at sea, and accustomed to early rising, he very properly continued that healthy exercise while in Chicago. Daybreak would see him abroad, while his lazy fellow-boarders would wear out the beds. One morning last week he rose with the lark, and it so happened that the proprietor of the house rose about the same time, and lay down on a sofa in the front parlor, with the window open to admit the cool morning breeze. While in this recumbent position the proprietor overheard his boarder say he was going to Detroit: that Detroit would be his headquarters, and, looking out of the window, saw two suspicious looking characters to whom the boarder was communicating his intention. On returning to the house the boarder denied having the least intention of going to Detroit.

His letters of credit on the Bank of England not being available, he borrowed $15 from a compatriot living in the same house, promising to pay it back on Monday. He left without paying, so trifling a sum having escaped his memory. He has not been seen or heard from since.

On the morning succeeding the night in which the attempt to rob the United States Treasury in this city, he got up early as usual, bought the morning papers, seemed unusually excited, and departed. It is supposed he was chief of the gang of burglars, who put up that job, and that the parcel at the Custom House was sent there so he might hang around the office and reconnoitre the premises.

Inquiries at the Custom House and at the Bank of Montreal, with which he pretended to do business, elicited the response that they knew no such person as Stanwood, the name under which he traveled. He was five feet eight inches high, had gray hair, was near-sighted and round-shouldered, carried eye-glasses, talked fast, and was elaborately tattooed on both arms. He is believed to have gone from here to Detroit.

TO THE PUBLIC OF OREGON:—The Good Templars of this State in their late Convention held in Albany present to the public a report of a committee, (one J. B. Garrison, of Portland, being chairman,) which for willful falsehood and black mail, is a first class fraud. These are the facts: I came to Oregon in May, 1865, and was duly authorized, at the request of the members of a convention of Good Templars, held at Salem, to organize a Grand Lodge. I did so, and some private work being necessary to the Grand Body which I was not in possession of at the May session, I was requested by the members of the newly organized G. L. to return to California, get the work and return to Oregon in the month of October following. I did so at my own expense—gave them the work, which they accepted—passed complimentary resolutions about me and yet when called upon to pay me for my services, declined giving me anything. I asked $160, but they would not pay me. 1—they admit I performed the service in all their reports. 2—Gave me a vote of thanks. 3—When I presented my bill, one hundred dollars, for traveling over one thousand miles, feeding myself and horse, they would not pay it. 4—They deny owing me anything, although admitting the services I rendered them, and 5—Now deny they owe me anything, warning the people of Oregon against listening to my side of the story, and black mail me for asking for my just dues. I don't blame the Good Templars of the State for such action, but a few interested creatures who are dragging the Body into the mire by their unjust and unworthy action. Having thus stamped the report of said committee as a base libel, I am at their service if they wish to bring the matter for investigation into any court of justice.

THURSDAY MORNING SEPT 4 1873

CITY.

A SERI[illegible] [illegible]—Any joke may be justly regarded as a serious one which tends to mar those gentle harmonious relations which are supposed to exist between lovers or to interfere with or destroy the consummation of a projected matrimonial alliance. As illustrative of the truth of this proposition we will relate an incident which transpired on board the steamer John L Stephens while that vessel was on the way to this port. For obvious reasons the names of the parties are omitted. On the way to this port among the passengers on board the John L Stephens was a young engineer who is soon to take a place on the Northern Pacific railroad. The same steamship brought hither a couple who are past the meridian of life who were accompanied by a very handsome and accomplished daughter. The first day out from San Francisco the first mate of the steamer became acquainted with the daughter and during the remainder of the voyage managed to pass all his leisure moments in the society of the young lady. A mutual friendship also sprang up between the mate of the steamer and the young engineer. The engineer on explaining to the mate the object of his coming to this State, was told in return that when the steamer passed Kalama he (the mate) would point out that place to him as the engineer's future headquarters. However after the vessel entered the mouth of the Columbia, and steamed up for Portland, the mate became so assiduous in his attentions to the young lady and so oblivious to what was transpiring about him, that Kalama was passed without him for once thinking of his promise to the young engineer. After Kalama was passed some distance, the engineer happened to enter the cabin. He discovered his friend the mate sitting vis a vis with his charmer. Suddenly at the sight of the mate the recollection of the promise came to his mind. Taking in the character of the situation at a glance the engineer conceived the idea that it would be vastly funny to play off a joke before those present, at the mate's expense. No sooner did the thought occur to him than he carried the joke into execution. Sauntering up to where the couple were seated, with an air of ignorance and innocence mingled, the engineer began the following conversation to the mate:

Engineer—Well Mr Officer, how do you find yourself?

Mate—Very well, indeed. Did you see your future home, Kalama, as we passed?

Engineer—Oh, yes. I am favorably impressed with the place. But by the way Mr [illegible] (with great seriousness) did you not tell me that your wife's brother resided in Kalama?

Mate (thunderstruck)—Who?

Engineer. Why you remember that you said your wife's brother was stopping at Kalama, and being a stranger, I am desirous of making his acquaintance.

The "[illegible]" of the mate can better be imagined than described at the appalling effects of this "joke." He assumed the variegated tints of the rainbow, inside of three seconds. The damsel looked "six ways for Sunday" at this sudden denouement, the parents' [illegible] reminded one of sauer-kraut, and the mate suddenly had duties to perform on deck. His prospects for matrimony had vanished like the baseless fabric of a dream, and left behind not even a wreck.

CLACKAMAS BRIDGE.—Months ago the contract was let for the construction of a bridge over the Clackamas at a point just below where the railroad bridge spans the stream. Two years ago the old bridge was swept away during a freshet. Early last spring the county authorities determined to build a new bridge near where the old bridge stood. The contract was let, and work soon after began. Since then a force of men have been constantly employed in erecting the new structure. The length of the bridge between the abutments is 213 feet. With the addition of the aprons at each end the entire length of the bridge, when finished will be about 300 feet. The piers are constructed of wood, crib-shaped and filled up with stone. Both of the abutments have been completed and a portion of the "stringers" laid from pier to pier. It is estimated that the heaviest portion of the work is finished. A number of carpenters are pushing forward with the work and the probabilities are that the entire structure will be completed by the middle of October.

[illegible] BACK.—The machinery for a portable sawmill is now lying on the O S N Co's wharf awaiting shipment to San Francisco. Weeks ago this same machinery was brought up from that place, en route for some part of [illegible] Oregon, where it was to be put up and set in operation. It reached its destination in [illegible], but for some reason the machinery did not "fill the bill," and was reshipped. The [illegible] steamer will carry the machinery [illegible]

THE PROG[illegible] CLUB.—An addition to the [illegible] Club rooms, comprising a portion of the second floor of Wiberg's brick building, is nearly finished. It will be divided into a [illegible] room state-room and private rooms. The membership of the Club now numbers ninety, and in less than two weeks the Club will have at least one hundred members. Mr. [illegible] Blum has been elected to the Secretaryship of the Club, Mr Dav Walters having re[illegible]

[illegible]ADING.—The East Portland Brass Band made a call at the residence of Mrs [illegible] Aphel, on Seventh and Stark streets Tuesday [illegible] to serenade a betrothed pair. A number of friends had assembled at the above mentioned place to join in congratulating the couple upon their prospective union. During the evening a most enjoyable time was passed. The band proceeded to other [illegible], where they discoursed delightful mu[illegible]

ANOTHER SYMPATHIZER.—Messrs J McCraken & Co are in receipt of a letter from F C Chapin, Esq., New York City general agent for the celebrated Oswego starch, from which we extract the following "I notice with great admiration the noble conduct of your citizens in the loss by the fire, and hope you may recover from its effects. If there are many suffering poor I should be glad to render aid. Can I do anything?"

FINE SHEEP.—A band of 150 head of fine blooded Spanish Merino sheep arrived last evening on the steamer John L Stephens, direct from Vermont. Messrs. Jewett & Munson are the importers of these fine animals and intend to take them to Salem where they will be offered for sale. If any remain unsold they will be placed on exhibition at the coming State Fair.

DISCHARGED.—The case of F R[illegible], charged with arson, was brought up in the Police Court yesterday morning, and the examination of witnesses concluded. From the facts brought forward evidences of his guilt were lacking, therefore he was discharged.

Mr Jacob Mayer who has been East for some time past purchasing a fall and winter stock, will arrive on the next steamer. During his absence Mr Werkenfall and assistants have been busily engaged in piling up the new arrivals.

MONTHLY SHIPMENT.—During the past month the money shipment through Wells Fargo & Co was as follows: [illegible] 036 65, bullion $70 314 1[illegible] [illegible] $8[illegible] 464 70

They are prepared to wait on their old customers and all who may want anything in their line. Recollect them those wishing saddlery harness etc. See card on second page.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the concert to be given this evening at Masonic Hall Madame Bishop will sing the Bouquet Musical ([illegible]) which comprises national melodies from the various countries she has visited and will sing them in their different languages. She will also sing the Trumpet Song, "Let the Bright Seraphim," from the Oratorio of Sampson with cornet obligato by Mr C W [illegible]. Many other musical gems will also be rendered this evening.

This evening a grand orchestral concert has been tendered Madame Bishop and her troupe by a number of our most talented and prominent instrumentalists. A very select and attractive vocal programme will be rendered by Madame Bishop and Messrs Gottschalk and Wilkie. The vocal renderings will be accompanied by the orchestra composed of a dozen or more pieces. Mr Frank Gilder the superb pianist will also preside at his chosen instrument during the evening. This concert has been tendered by our musicians as a substantial testimony of their regard and appreciation of this famous queen of song and the other eminent artists composing the troupe. Madame Bishop and troupe depart from the State to-morrow by steamer and a more favorable opportunity could hardly be afforded to tender the company this last token of friendship. During her brief visit to this city Madame Bishop has won a warm niche in the public heart and the kindly sympathies which her wondrous powers of song has awakened will cause her memory to be cherished and remembered long after her voice has ceased to warble on earth.

The last concert of the series was given last evening at Masonic Hall. Rarely have we ever witnessed a larger audience within the walls of that building than was present on that occasion. The audience was delighted at the performance and testified their hearty appreciation by a storm of applause at the close of each rendering. Want of space forbids particularization further than to say that Madame Bishop won golden opinions and fresh laurels in her felicitous renderings of the selection from the opera Il Crociato in Egitto, The Last Rose of Summer in the ditto "Quanto Amore" (by request), Mexican Cancion "La Calatumba" and in the last grand scene from the last act of the opera La Sonnambula. She received encores after the conclusion of each selection. Mr Gottschalk sang with his usual power and effect, and was compelled in every instance to respond to the prolonged applause. Mr Wilkie has reason to congratulate himself on the flattering tokens he received of appreciation from the audience. He won several well merited encores. The pianist, Mr Gilder played with his usual brilliancy, and after playing in his unapproachable style the piano solo at the commencement of part first was called three times in succession to the instrument before the audience seemed satisfied. This evening the last concert will be given.

The Council last evening ordered paid a bill of 50 cents from the Oregon and California Railroad Company for freight charges on a coil of hose, which the Salem Department had accidentally left behind on the occasion of the fire of August 2d.

A friend tells us a good story on Capt Whyte, of the Forward. While at Astoria a klootchman stepped up to him and presenting to his notice a basket full of crabs, offered to sell the lot for sitkum dolla—half dollar. The Captain planked down a dollar and took six remarking that "it was a mighty high price." He hadn't got the hang of Chinook jargon evidently.

PERSONAL.

H Y Thompson Esq returned yesterday from Astoria.

Mr C E Tilton of New York, arrived on the last steamer from San Francisco.

D D Orton formerly a resident of Oregon, came up last steamer from Santa Barbara where he has resided for the last five years.

Prof Williamson of the public schools returned a few days ago from an extended tour through Eastern Oregon. He returns in excellent health and good spirits.

Mr Bernard Lewis agent of Lewis Brothers, San Francisco, is back again from the east of the mountains, and will proceed southward shortly on his way to the Golden City.

Prof Baumgras a prominent artist from Washington, is spending a few days at the Bishop Scott Grammar School where he is engaged in painting our mountain and river scenery. The Professor has spent over a year on this coast sketching the points of interest from Southern California to British Columbia. We hope soon to see some of the finished products of his pencil on exhibition.

TO THE PUBLIC.

We are now getting on the way a new and fresh stock of fine furniture which will be superior in quality and newer in design than the one destroyed by the fire and which we will offer for sale on advantageous terms. Meanwhile we are well prepared to supply the present demand from our temporary location corner of Fifth and Taylor streets, near the U S Custom House. Respectfully

HURGREN & SHINDLER

No man should be without a good suit of clothing while BECK & WALDMAN are offering goods at remarkably low prices. You will be astonished when you take a look at their stock which has been and is being increased to such an extent that more space must be had to give place to the new arrival. Don't wait but improve the opportunity to invest at the present time. You will never regret your purchases of Beck & Waldman S W cor of Washington and Front streets.

THE WEBFOOT GENIUS.

The steamer John L Stephens which arrived here on Tuesday evening brought Mr Frank Crouch who has recently won for himself the enviable distinction of the Webfoot Genius. Yesterday he made a call at our office and afforded us an opportunity of learning from his own lips the history of the inventions of which he is the author that have given him such a reputation both in California and Oregon. Doubtless our readers have heard through the press the very important invention made by Mr Crouch of a new steam engine which after a thorough trial by experienced machinists has been found to work like a charm. So entirely new is Mr Crouch's patent that it not only astonished the most skillful mechanics and inventors on the Pacific coast but it promises if wholly feasible in its many modes of application to fairly revolutionize the present manner of utilizing steam power in driving machinery of all kinds and in propelling ships and boats against wind and tide.

As indicated by the sobriquet which he has earned Mr Crouch is a genuine native of Webfoot. California papers have been laboring earnestly to create the impression abroad that he was born in that State and therefore can be claimed by the Californians. But such is not the case. D H Crouch the father of Frank emigrated from California in 1848 and settled in Southern Oregon. He is a carpenter by trade and a poor man. Frank was born on the 8th of February 1850 in Douglas county. He is the oldest of a family of eight children. Very early in life Frank began manifesting a strong inclination and great talent for machinery. At the age of ten years he invented and made a small rotary machine. His father fearing that his son if allowed to follow his own bent of mind would neglect his other and more important education discouraged the boy and forbade him devoting any more time to what was deemed useless experiments. But his father soon learned that he could not divert Frank's attention to other matters. Every spare leisure moment the youthful machinist devoted eagerly to the prosecution of his darling schemes. He studied with great avidity and aptitude natural philosophy and chemistry and never appeared more happy than when engaged in making experiments.

One year ago last July at the time the Oregon and California railroad reached Roseburg Frank had an opportunity of seeing his first locomotive. He quickly made friends with the firemen and drivers on the line, got a ride on the locomotive now and again, and made good use of such little chances. His father soon saw that what was in him was worth bringing out and the pair started for Salem where Mr Crouch hoped to be able to apprentice Frank in some establishment where he would find scope to cultivate his genius. Meeting at that place with no success they came to this city. His father being poor he had no means to enable Frank to make a model of his new engine which he had been experimenting upon for more than three years. Father and son traveled all over the city endeavoring to interest parties in the invention who had ample means to prosecute the matter to a successful consummation. He explained the nature of the invention to a number of machinists of Portland, but every person was disposed to give a cold shoulder to the project. During the time Frank remained in the city he was so poor that he was compelled to beat carpets to pay his board.

Failing to accomplish anything in Portland as a dernier resort Mr Crouch determined to go to San Francisco and see if he could not elicit the interest of some person there who had the means and disposition to give the invention a fair, impartial trial. With considerable difficulty the father procured sufficient money to secure a passage below in the steerage. He succeeded in making arrangements with the officers of the steamer by which Frank could work his passage to San Francisco by heaving coal. In this manner, both father and son reached that city in a destitute condition. The elder Crouch being a carpenter soon found employment while Frank obtained work in carrying brick. It was about the first of last April when they reached San Francisco. They were so destitute that they lived on ten cents apiece per day and slept in the shavings at night. After some time Frank found a warm friend in Mr Huntington the proprietor of a workshop at 18 Fremont street, and there the model was taken in hand and completed.

Mr Crouch now remembered that he had an old friend at San Jose and he went down there with the model. It was started to chop straw for feed and worked so perfectly that the attention was attracted of Messrs. Bishop & Moore the well known bankers. Frank explained his system and so convinced them of its merits that they offered to supply capital up to $5,000, to enable him to build.

A REGULAR [illegible]

At last the long waited for chance had come, the father and son returned to San Francisco, their patrons answering for all expenses, and Frank lost no time in getting his machine under way. Like the model, it was made at Mr Huntington's in San Francisco. Since then it has been inspected by many well known engineers, all of whom speak of it in the highest terms.

The main point of the young mechanic's invention is the super-heating of the steam which after being generated in the boiler passes into cylinders set right upon the fire and in these the pistons which are headless work. So entirely is the steam utilized and consumed that when the machine is running none whatever escapes as in every ordinary machine. There is an immense economy of fuel and of space and there being no pressure whatever thrown on the boiler, all danger of an explosion is done away with; moreover the cylinders being always kept perfectly dry by the heat there is no occasion to stop the engine and let the water run off as in the system now in use.

It seems the opinion of practical men that Crouch's invention is destined to make a complete revolution in the manner of utilizing steam power. He has also several other inventions, one of a water regulator for boilers, which Mr Stevens the Chief Engineer of the Pacific Mail Company and other competent judges have pronounced the most perfectly simple and efficient apparatus of the kind it is possible to conceive. Another is an important invention in telegraphy, by means of which trains can be run without regard to time and without danger of colliding, each train being able to tell with unerring accuracy just where other trains are. If this invention can be perfected and applied it will be one of the most wonderful discoveries of the present age. Mr Crouch has also invented a plan by which all the clocks in a large city can be run by means of electricity and with the most unvarying uniformity.

Mr Crouch and Frank will leave for southern Oregon this morning. After spending a few days at his old home Frank will return to San Francisco to prosecute further inventions.

COMMON COUNCIL.

REGULAR MEETING SEPTEMBER 3 1873

The Common Council of the city of Portland met pursuant to ordinance. His Honor H Failing Mayor in the chair.

Present—W S Caldwell Clerk, Capt J H Wilcox, Chief of Police; Councilmen Bes[illegible], Burton, Lyon, Marshall and Russell.

Absent—Councilmen Caywood, Hill, H[illegible] and Story.

The Journal of the last meeting was read and approved.

ORDINANCES VETOED

His Honor the Mayor returned the ordinance extending the fire limits without his signature for the reason that said ordinance was not impartial to all property affected thereby. The ordinance was then read and the question being shall the ordinance pass notwithstanding the veto the vote was taken and failing to receive a two thirds vote the ordinance was lost.

His Mayor also returned without his approval the ordinance adopting the lateral extension or widening of Second street. The ordinance being read and the vote taken it failed to pass.

PETITIONS, ETC

The petitions of D Monnastes and others for the widening of First street from Morrison to Montgomery street was read and referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Property.

The petition of John [illegible] and others asking that stricter surveillance be kept of the places where persons were sick with smallpox was read and referred to the Board of Health.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The Committee on Streets and Public Property reported recommending that an alias warrant issue to sell a fractional lot on Twelfth street belonging to Henry Ross for delinquent taxes. The report was adopted.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS

The Superintendent of Streets submitted a report of the estimates to be made in the proposed improvement of B street which was read and referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Property.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE CITY

The following claims were ordered paid: Bulletin $62 48, Bellinger Curry & Co $4 50, R Hendrie $411 83, Portland Gas Light Co $150 21, Police Commissioners $72, J K Gill $20 75, Geo H Himes $6, Portland Gas Light Co $19 45, S J Spray $25, R I Durham $45, S J McCormick $22 50, R A Habersham $7 75, J H Butler $64, John Donnerberg, $63 58, Oregon Dray Co, $1, Holman & Co $2, Oregon and California Railroad Co 50 cents.

The bill of E Newsome $7 50 was referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Property, that of W Braden $3 to the Committee on Health and Police and that of the Portland Water Company $750 to the Committee on Fire and Water.

ORDINANCES

An ordinance to provide for the improvement of First street between Hall and Lincoln streets was read a first and second time, rule suspended, ordinance read a third time and passed.

An ordinance providing for the improvement of Clay street by laying a main sewer therein, was read a first and second time.

An ordinance providing for the improvement of Stark street, from Front to Second street was read a first and second time.

An ordinance relating to obstruction of streets by the erection of awnings, was read a third time and passed.

An ordinance providing for the improvement of that part of Oak street, lying in front of lot 5 in block 26 was read a third time and passed.

MISCELLANEOUS

The following resolutions were adopted:

That the Common Council is in favor of the passage of an ordinance providing for the lateral extension of First street, from Morrison street to Montgomery, in accordance with the petitions of property owners thereon and that those intending to build on the property adjoining said street should govern themselves accordingly.

That the City Surveyor be instructed to make a survey and report a plat of the proposed lateral extension of First street to the Common Council at its next meeting.

That the Committee on Streets and Public Property be authorized to rent the old city jail for the term of one year.

That whereas retrenchment is the order of the day, the Common Council believing that the city jail could be kept clean by the prisoners confined therein, said Council will pay no more bills for cleaning said jail.

That it being expedient to to settle the question of widening First street as soon as possible that when the Council adjourn it be to meet on Saturday evening September 6th instant to hear the report of the City Surveyor in the matter of the proposal to widen said street.

On motion the Council adjourned.

CALL FOR A REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A Republican State Convention for the State of Oregon will be held at the city of Albany on Thursday the 11th day of September 1873, at 2 o'clock P M for the purpose of nominating a candidate for member of Congress to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon J C Wilson and for the transaction of such other business as may be deemed proper.

The several counties will be entitled to delegates in such Convention as follows:

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, briskness of spirits and a hearty appetite. Look at the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. IN MEMORIAM.

James E. Wyche died of consumption at Erie, Pennsylvania August [illegible] 187[illegible] aged [illegible] years.

The deceased was born in Mississippi graduated at Denison College, Granville, Ohio and adopted the profession of the law. He was engaged in the practice at various places including Grand Rapids and Chicago until the year 1861 when he received from President Lincoln an appointment as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of this (Washington) Territory. He arrived here with his family in July 1861 and took his seat upon the bench at the fall term 1861 at Vancouver. He retained his position as Associate Justice until 1869 after which he engaged in the practice of the law until the fall of 1872 when after a heroic struggle with his disease he was compelled to retire. About three months since he went East in hopes of in some measure recruiting his health and died as above stated.

As a Judge he was able, fearless and upright. When engaged in the trial of a cause he knew no man, no party—he knew nothing but the law—and he administered that as one who must give an account.

As a lawyer he was true and faithful and zealous in behalf of his client, and those who employed him knew well that their interests were in good hands.

The writer hereof had known the deceased from 1861 until his death, had known him socially, professionally and in ordinary business transactions. Socially Judge Wyche was an affable and courteous gentleman, ever ready with a kind word and hearty welcome; as a business man Judge Wyche was simply an honest man. The writer has been both his creditor and his debtor and whatever Judge Wyche promised, that he performed in letter and spirit.

Of Judge Wyche as a husband and father I may not speak, save only to say he gave himself for them. His family were all in all to him; he was nothing to himself.

Some time before his death he made an open profession of religion, but he was always a sincere Christian at heart, and his heart and purse were always open in behalf of the good and true. In his last will he has given this testimony: "A belief in the resurrection promised in His revelation, is the only sure foundation for happiness in this life or the life to come."

And now what more remains to be said. Dear friend, you fought a good fight. You did quit yourself like a man, and was strong, and though thine eyes are closed in death, we are not without hope for "Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty. They shall behold the land that is very far off."

COLEMAN'S EUCALYPTUS. Dr J S Coleman's Compound Extract of Eucalyptus is a preparation combining all the valuable medical qualities of the Eucalyptus, which is cultivated in nearly every California garden for its medical utility, having become the household remedy for all diseases of the KIDNEYS, BLADDER and URINARY CANAL, and SEMINAL WEAKNESS. It seems to have a direct affinity for the GENITO-URINARY ORGANS and their surroundings and cures them by its alterative healing and [illegible] properties more effectually than any other known remedy.

It is an invaluable remedy for all diseases of the mucous and serous membranes, such as BRONCHITIS, HACKING COUGH, NAUSEA DURING PREGNANCY, DYSPEPSIA, LEUCORRHOEA etc.

This preparation is the result of Dr Coleman's experiments with the medicinal properties of the tree in the U S Marine Hospital in San Francisco in 1871 and 1872, where he had unusual facilities for testing the various methods of preparing the remedy and its uses. It can be relied upon as certain to give the promised results and hundreds of testimonials of its efficacy can be seen at his office, 409 Kearney street, San Francisco.

COLEMAN'S DOUBLE EXTRACT OF EUCALYPTUS is a powerful yet harmless febrifuge and is a special preparation for the treatment of the malarious fevers of our interior valleys, and is warranted to cure any case of FEVER AND AGUE treated with it according to directions, while the baneful results of the usual Quinine and arsenical remedies of these diseases are entirely avoided.

FOR PHYSICIANS: Coleman's Fluid Extract of Eucalyptus in 1-lb bottles.

EUCALYPTUS. Beware of imitations and take none but COLEMAN'S. For sale everywhere, and by HODGE, CALEF & CO, Wholesale Druggists, Portland. Sole Agents for Oregon.

CITY.

A SERIOUS JOKE—Any joke may be justly regarded as a serious one which tends to mar those gentle harmonious relations which are supposed to exist between lovers or to interfere with or destroy the consummation of a projected matrimonial alliance. As illustrative of the truth of this proposition we will relate an incident which transpired on board the steamer John L. Stephens while that vessel was on the way to this port. For obvious reasons the names of the parties are omitted. On the way to this port, among the passengers on board the John L. Stephens was a young engineer who is soon to take a place on the Northern Pacific railroad. The same steamship brought hither a couple who are past the meridian of life who were accompanied by a very handsome and accomplished daughter. The first day out from San Francisco the first mate of the steamer became acquainted with the daughter and during the remainder of the voyage managed to pass all his leisure moments in the society of the young lady. A mutual friendship also sprang up between the mate of the steamer and the young engineer. The engineer on explaining to the mate the object of his coming to this State was told in return that when the steamer passed Kalama he (the mate) would point out that place to him as the engineer's future headquarters. However, after the vessel entered the mouth of the Columbia, and steamed up for Portland the mate became so assiduous in his attentions to the young lady and so oblivious to what was transpiring about him that Kalama was passed without him for once thinking of his promise to the young engineer. After Kalama was [illegible] some distance, the engineer happened to enter the cabin. He discovered his friend the mate sitting vis a vis with his charmer. Suddenly at the sight of the mate the recollection of the promise came to his mind. Taking in the character of the situation at a glance, the engineer conceived the idea that it would be vastly funny to play off a joke before those [illegible] at the mate's expense. No sooner did the thought occur to him than he carried the joke into execution. Sauntering up to where the couple were seated, with an air of ignorance and innocence mingled the engineer [illegible] the following conversation to the mate:

Engineer—Well Mr Officer how do you find yourself?

Mate—Very well, indeed. Did you see your future home, Kalama, as we passed?

Engineer—Oh yes. I am favorably im[illegible] with the place. But by the way Mr Officer (with great seriousness) did you not tell me that your wife's brother resided in Kalama?

Mate (thunderstruck)—Wh[illegible]?

Engineer—Why you remember that you said your wife's brother was stopping at Kalama, and being a stranger, I am desirous of making his acquaintance.

The "ph[illegible] links" of the mate can better be [illegible] than described at the spalling effects of this joke." He assumed the variegated tints of the rainbow, inside of three seconds. The damsel looked "six ways for Sunday" at this sudden denouement, the parents' looks reminded one of sauer-kraut, and the [illegible] suddenly had duties to perform on deck. His prospects for matrimony had vanished like the baseless fabric of a dream and left behind not even a wreck.

CLACKAMAS BRIDGE.—Months ago the contract was let for the construction of a bridge over the Clackamas at a point just below where the railroad bridge spans the stream. Two years ago the old bridge was swept away during a freshet. Early last spring the county authorities determined to build a new bridge near where the old bridge stood. The contract was let, and work soon after begun. Since then a force of men have been constantly employed in erecting the new structure. The length of the bridge bet[illegible] the abutments is 213 feet. With the addition of the aprons at each end the entire length of the bridge, when finished will be about 300 feet. The piers are constructed of wood crib-shaped, and filled up with stone. Both of the abutments have been completed and a portion of the "stringers" laid from pier to pier. It is estimated that the heaviest portion of the work is finished. A number of carpenters are pushing forward with the work and the probabilities are that the entire structure will be completed by the middle of October.

[illegible] BACK.—The machinery for a portable [illegible] is now lying on the O S N Co's wharf awaiting shipment to San Francisco. Weeks ago this same machinery was brought up from that place, en route for some part of [illegible] Oregon, where it was to be put up and set in operation. It reached its destination in [illegible], but for some reason the machinery did not "fill the bill," and was reshipped. The [illegible] steamer will carry the machinery [illegible]

THE PROGRESS CLUB.—An addition to the Progress Club rooms, comprising a portion of the second floor of Wiberg's brick building, is nearly finished. It will be divided into a [illegible] room, store-room and private rooms. The membership of the Club now numbers ninety, and in less than two weeks the Club will have at least one hundred members. [illegible]ADING.—The East Portland Brass Band made a call at the residence of Mrs Apbel, on Seventh and Stark streets Tuesday [illegible] to serenade a betrothed pair. A number of friends had [illegible]bled at the above mentioned place to join in congratulating the couple upon their prospective union. During the evening a most enjoyable time was [illegible]. The band proceeded to other [illegible] where they discoursed delightful [illegible]

[illegible] SYMPATHIZER.—Messrs J McCraken & Co are in receipt of a letter from I C Chapin, Esq, New York City, general agent for the [illegible] Oswego starch, from which we extract the following: "I notice with great admiration the noble conduct of your citizens in the [illegible] by the fire and hope you may recover from its effects. If there are many sufferers [illegible] I should be glad to render aid. Can I do anything?"

FINE SHEEP.—A band of 150 head of fine blooded Spanish Merino sheep arrived last evening on the steamer John L. Stephens direct from Vermont. Messrs Jewett & Munson are the importers of these fine animals and intend to take them to Salem where they will be offered for sale. If any remain unsold they will be placed on exhibition at the coming State Fair.

[illegible] CHARGED.—The case of F Ross charged with arson was brought up in the Police Court yesterday morning, and the examination of wit[illegible] concluded. From the facts brought forward evidences of his guilt were lacking, therefore he was discharged.

Mr Jacob Mayer who has been East for some time past purchasing a fall and winter stock, will arrive on the next steamer. During his absence Mr Weidenfeld and assistants have been busily engaged in piling up the new arrivals.

M[illegible] SHIPMENT.—During the past month the money shipment through Wells Fargo & Co was as follows: [illegible] $[illegible] 66, bullion $70 314 1[illegible] [illegible] $8 464 70

AMUSEMENTS

At the concert to be given this evening at Masonic Hall Madame Bishop will sing the Bouquet Musical ([illegible]) which comprises national melodies from the various countries she has visited and will sing them in their different languages. She will also sing the Trumpet Song "Let the Bright Seraphim" from the Oratorio of Samson with a cornet obligato by Mr C W [illegible]. Many other musical gems will also be rendered this evening.

This evening a grand orchestral concert has been tendered Madame Bishop and her troupe by a number of our most talented and prominent instrumentalists. A very select and attractive vocal programme will be rendered by Madame Bishop and Messrs Gottschalk and Wilks. The vocal renderings will be accompanied by the orchestra composed of a dozen or more pieces. Mr Frank Gilder the superb pianist will also preside at his chosen instrument during the evening. This concert has been tendered by our musicians as a substantial testimony of their regard and appreciation of this famous queen of song and the other eminent artists composing the troupe. Madame Bishop and troupe depart from the State to-morrow by steamer and a more favorable opportunity could hardly be afforded to tender the company this last token of friendship. During her brief visit to this city Madame Bishop has won a warm niche in the public heart and the kindly sympathies which her wondrous powers of song has awakened will cause her memory to be cherished and remembered long after her voice has ceased to warble on earth.

The last concert of the series was given last evening at Masonic Hall. Hardly have we ever witnessed a larger audience within the walls of that building than was present on that occasion. The audience was delighted at the performance and testified their hearty appreciation by a storm of applause at the close of each rendering. Want of space forbids particularization further than to say that Madame Bishop won golden opinions and fresh laurels in her felicitous renderings of the selection from the opera "Il Crociato in Eggitto," The Last Rose of Summer in the duetto Quanto Amore (by request) Mexican Cancion "La Calatumba," and in the last grand scene from the last act of the opera "La Sonnambula." She received encores after the conclusion of each selection. Mr Gottschalk sang with his usual power and effect and was compelled, in every instance to respond to the prolonged applause. Mr Wilks has reason to congratulate himself on the flattering tokens he received of appreciation from the audience. He won several well merited encores. The pianist, Mr Gilder played with his usual brilliancy and after playing in his unapproachable style, the piano solo at the commencement of part first was called three times in succession to the instrument before the audience seemed satisfied. This evening the last concert will be given.

THE WEBFOOT GENIUS

The steamer John L. Stephens which reached [illegible] evening brought Mr Frank Crouch who has recently won for [illegible] abroad the enviable distinction of the Webfoot Genius. Yesterday he made [illegible] and afforded us an opportunity of learning from his own lips the history of his inventions of which he is the author that have given him such a reputation both in California and Oregon. Doubtless our readers have heard through the press the very important invention made by Mr Crouch of a new steam engine which after thorough trial by experienced machinists has been found to work like a charm. So certainly is Mr Crouch's patent that it not only astonished the most skillful machinists and inventors on the Pacific coast but it promises if wholly feasible in its many modes of application to fairly revolutionize the present manner of utilizing steam power in driving machinery of all kinds and in propelling ships and boats against wind and tide.

As indicated by the sobriquet which he has earned Mr Crouch is a genuine native of Webfoot. California papers have been laboring assiduously to create the impression abroad that he was born in that State and therefore could be claimed by the Californians. But such is not the case. D H Crouch the father of Frank emigrated from California in 1848 and settled in Southern Oregon. He is a carpenter by trade and a poor man. Frank was born on the 8th of February 1855 in Douglas county. He is the oldest of a family of eight children. Very early in life Frank began manifesting a strong inclination and great talent for machinery. At the age of ten years he invented and made a small reaping machine. His father fearing that his son if allowed to follow his own bent of mind would neglect his other and more important education discouraged the boy, and forbade him devoting any more time to what was deemed useless experiments. But his father soon learned that he could not divert Frank's attention to other matters. Every spare leisure moment the youthful machinist devoted eagerly to the prosecution of his darling schemes. He studied with great avidity and aptitude natural philosophy and chemistry and never appeared more happy than when engaged in making experiments.

One year ago last July at the time the Oregon and California railroad reached Roseburg Frank had an opportunity of seeing his first locomotive. He quickly made friends with the firemen and drivers on the line, got a ride on the locomotive now and again and made good use of such little chances. His father soon saw that what was in him was worth bringing out and the pair started for Salem where Mr Crouch hoped to be able to apprentice Frank in some establishment where he would find scope to cultivate his genius. Meeting at that place with no success they came to this city. His father being poor he had no means to enable Frank to make a model of his new engine which he had been experimenting upon for more than three years. Father and son traveled all over the city endeavoring to interest parties in the invention who had ample means to prosecute the matter to a successful consummation. He explained the nature of the invention to a number of machinists of Portland, but every person was disposed to give a cold shoulder to the project. During the time Frank remained in the city he was so poor that he was compelled to beat carpets to pay his board.

Failing to accomplish anything in Portland as a dernier resort Mr Crouch determined to go to San Francisco and see if he could not elicit the interest of some person there who had the means and disposition to give the invention a fair, impartial trial. With considerable difficulty the father procured sufficient money to secure a passage below in the steerage. He succeeded in making arrangements with the officers of the steamer by which Frank could work his passage to San Francisco by heaving coal. In this manner, both father and son reached that city in a destitute condition. The elder Crouch being a carpenter soon found employment while Frank obtained work in carrying brick. It was about the first of last April when they reached San Francisco. They were so destitute that they lived on ten cents apiece per day and slept in the shavings at night. After some time Frank found a warm friend in Mr Huntington the proprietor of a workshop at 18 Fremont street, and there the model was taken in hand and completed.

Mr Crouch now remembered that he had an old friend at San Jose and he went down there with the model. It was started to chop straw for feed and worked so perfectly that the attention was attracted of Messrs. Bishop & Moore the well known bankers. Frank explained his system and so convinced them of its merits that they offered to supply capital up to $5,000, to enable him to build

A REGULAR ENGINE

At last the long waited for chance had come; the father and son returned to San Francisco, their patrons answering for all expenses, and Frank lost no time in getting his machine under way. Like the model it was made at Mr Huntington's in San Francisco. Since then it has been inspected by many well known engineers, all of whom speak of it in the highest terms.

The main point of the young mechanic's invention is the superheating of the steam which after being generated in the boiler passes into cylinders set right upon the fire and in these the pistons which are headless work. So entirely is the steam utilized and consumed that when the machine is running none whatever escapes as in every ordinary machine. There is an immense economy of fuel and of space and there being no pressure whatever thrown on the boiler all danger of an explosion is done away with, moreover the cylinders being always kept perfectly dry by the heat there is no occasion to stop the engine and let the water run off as in the system now in use.

It seems the opinion of practical men that Crouch's invention is destined to make a complete revolution in the manner of utilizing steam power. He has also several other inventions one of a water regulator for boilers, which Mr Stevens the Chief Engineer of the Pacific Mail Company and other competent judges have pronounced the most perfectly simple and efficient apparatus of the kind it is possible to conceive. Another is an important invention in telegraphy, by means of which trains can be run without regard to time and without danger of colliding, each train being able to tell with unerring accuracy just where other trains are. If this invention can be perfected and applied it will be one of the most wonderful discoveries of the present age. Mr Crouch has also invented a plan by which all the clocks in a large city can be run by means of electricity and with the most undeviating uniformity.

Mr Crouch and Frank will leave for southern Oregon this morning. After spending a few days at his old home Frank will return to San Francisco to prosecute further inventions.

IN MEMORIAM

James E. Wyche died of consumption at Erie, Pennsylvania August 9 1873 aged [illegible] years.

The deceased was born in Mississippi graduated at Denison College, Granville Ohio and adopted the profession of the law. He was engaged in the practice at various places including Grand Rapids and Chicago until the year 1861 when he received from President Lincoln an appointment as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of this (Washington) Territory. He arrived here with his family in July 1861 and took his seat upon the bench at the fall term 1861 at Vancouver. He retained his position as Associate Justice until 186[illegible] after which he engaged in the practice of the law until the fall of 1872 when after a heroic struggle with his disease he was compelled to retire. About three months since he went East in hopes of in some measure recruiting his health and died as above stated.

As a Judge he was able fearless and upright. When engaged in the trial of a cause he knew no man no party—he knew nothing but the law—and he administered that as one who must give an account.

As a lawyer he was true and faithful and zealous in behalf of his client and those who employed him knew well that their interests were in good hands.

The writer hereof had known the deceased from 1861 until his death had known him socially professionally and in ordinary business transactions. Socially Judge Wyche was an affable and courteous gentleman ever ready with a kind word and hearty welcome; as a business man Judge Wyche was simply an honest man. The writer has been both his creditor and his debtor and whatever Judge Wyche promised, that he performed in letter and spirit.

Of Judge Wyche as a husband and father I may not speak save only to say he gave himself for them. His family were all in all to him; he was nothing to himself.

Some time before his death he made an open profession of religion, but he was always a sincere Christian at heart, and his heart and purse were always open in behalf of the good and true. In his last will he has given this testimony: "A belief in the resurrection promised in His revelation, is the only sure foundation for happiness in this life or the life to come."

And now what more remains to be said. Dear friend you fought a good fight. You did quit yourself like a man, and was strong and though thine eyes are closed in death we are not without hope, for "Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty. They shall behold the land that is very far off." * * *

COLEMAN'S EUCALYPTUS

Dr J S Coleman's Compound Extract of Eucalyptus is a preparation combining all the valuable medical qualities of the Eucalyptus which is cultivated in nearly every California garden for its [illegible] having become the household remedy for all diseases of the KIDNEYS BLADDER and URINARY CANAL and SEMINAL WEAKNESS. It seems to have a direct affinity for the GENITO-URINARY ORGANS and their surroundings and cures them by its alterative healing and balsamic properties more effectually than any other known remedy.

It is an invaluable remedy for all diseases of the mucous and serous membranes, such as BRONCHITIS, HACKING COUGH, NAUSEA DURING PREGNANCY, DYSPEPSIA, LEUCORRHŒA etc.

This preparation is the result of Dr Coleman's experiments with the medicinal properties of the tree in the U S Marine Hospital in San Francisco in 1871 and 1872, where he had unusual facilities for testing the vast usefulness of preparing the remedy and its uses. It can be relied upon as certain to give the promised results and hundreds of testimonials of its efficacy can be seen at his office 400 Kearney street San Francisco.

COLEMAN'S DOUBLE EXTRACT OF EUCALYPTUS is a powerful, yet harmless, febrifuge and is a special preparation for the treatment of the malarious fevers of our interior valleys and is warranted to cure any case of FEVER AND AGUE treated with it according to directions while the baneful results of the usual Quinine and arsenical remedies of those diseases are entirely avoided.

THE HEATHEN PASS-EE

MR. BRET HARTE AT AN ENGLISH UNIVERSITY

The London Spectator in a review of "The Light Green," a new book of parodies just published in England, says that the gem of the whole is "The Heathen Pass-ee." A Pass-ee, it is explained, being a term applied

To one whose wealth is passing
The ordinary B. A. degree

The heathen in question, "Tom Crib" by name, has plots that are dark and not always in vain. One of these plots so eerie he passes an excellent examination in Euclid, the subject he feared. But

He'd placed up his sleeve
Mr. Todhunter's excellent Euclid
The same with intent to deceive

In a second attempt his fate overtakes him. Mr. Bret Harte shall tell us how

"But I shall not forget
How the next day or two
A stiff paper was set
By Examiner U—
On Euripides' tragedy, the Medea,
A subject Tom "partially knew."

But the knowledge displayed
By that heathen Pass-ee,
And the answers he made
Were quite frightful to see,
For he rapidly floored the whole paper
By about twenty minutes to three.

Then I looked up at U—
And he gazed upon me
I observed, "This won't do."
He replied, "Goodness me!
We are fooled by this artful young person,"
And he sent for that heathen Pass-ee

The scene that ensued
Was disgraceful to view,
For the floor it was strewed
With a tolerable few
Of the "tips" that Tom Crib had been hiding
For the "subject he partially knew."

On the cuff of his shirt
He had managed to get
What we hoped had been dirt,
But which proved, I regret
To be notes on the rise of the Drama,
A question invariably set

In his various coats
We proceeded to seek
Where we found sundry notes
And with sorrow I speak
One of Bohn's publications so useful
To the student of Latin or Greek.

In the crown of his cap
Were the Furies and Fates
And a delicate map
Of the Dorian states,
And we found in his palms which were hollow,
What are frequent in palms—that is dates

A SCENE IN CONGRESS.

In his "Reminiscences of the Past," now being published in the Washington Chronicle ex-Senator Foote relates the following incident

It was early in the summer of 1848 that an occurrence took place in Washington City which was productive of great excitement at the time, and which called forth, also, much of that sort of crimination and recrimination which never fails to leave behind it feelings of permanent alienation and rancor except, perchance in a few bosoms of a more generous mold than ordinary mortals can expect to possess. Several of the unfortunate sons and daughters of a race whom a selfish and semi-barbarous policy [illegible] in the old world, and darkening with its gloomy shadows the beautiful hills and valleys of our own natal land for more than two sad centuries of shame and sorrow, were prompted by that love of freedom which is everywhere inherent in the human bosom, to project their scheme for their own enfranchisement, and it was understood that some of them had sought concealment and refuge in the free States of the North, whither they had been counseled to go by several members of Congress of much and deserved prominence at the time. One or two of these refugees were reported to have been in the ownership of [illegible] Washington, not for sale—which would have been a palpable violation of the then existing laws of the District of Columbia—but as domestic servants, and [illegible] by them, at [illegible] altogether essential to the convenience and comfort of themselves and of their families. A movement so unusual and [illegible] to bode such extensive mischief in the future may be easily imagined to have had a very startling influence in certain quarters, and much aggravation was supposed to have been lent to this affair by the circumstance that the members of Congress from the free States, who were charged to have given their countenance to this project of elopement, boldly confessed their own complicity therein, both in the newspapers and in two houses of the national Legislature. When I [illegible] ing after the flight of these poor children of bondage had occurred, [illegible] Mr [illegible] on his feet, and [illegible] with a fervid vehemence of tone and manner, very unusual with this grave and solemn Senator what he depicted as a fearful outrage upon the whole body of Southern slaveholders—an outrage he said, which, if tamely submitted to, would in a short time bring about the entire overthrow of a system of labor alike indispensable to the enjoyment and prosperity of the cotton and tobacco growing region as the wealth and greatness of other portions of the republic. When he closed his remarks, not without striking indications of exhaustion, he came to my seat and said "I now leave this matter in the hands of my younger friends from the South. I have stood here long in the front of battle, almost single handed and alone defending the rights of our slaveholding constituents, and I begin to feel it to be high time that such men as your colleague, Mr. Davis, and yourself, should come forward to my relief." This was an appeal which I found it almost impossible [illegible] the time when I would have either gone or sent an [illegible] in quest of a runaway slave, and had always been disposed to recognize the fact that [illegible] acuteness and intelligence were [illegible] to achieve his own de[illegible] might be well pre[illegible] capable of enjoying a [illegible] maintaining [illegible] Waiting a few minutes [illegible] John P. Hale, of [illegible] a most stormy and [illegible] his faculty in [illegible] and striking epi[illegible] I [illegible] ly confess, [illegible] of the mo[illegible] and insulting [illegible] a grave and [illegible] which I told [illegible] he to visit Mississippi and [illegible] at which he had [illegible] all doubt that he [illegible] of being strung up on [illegible] of the forest and that [illegible] there be any want of a [illegible] I would myself turn hang[illegible] benefit. These frantic and rude [illegible] had scarcely been enunciated ere I [illegible] painfully sensible of the stupid and [illegible] ping nature of my conduct, and I [illegible] have really given worlds to recall all nonsense I had uttered. In less than forty eight hours I received hundreds of anonymous letters, filled with the most caustic revilement and others inclosing the most hideous caricatures of a person whom these same caricatures denominated "Hangman Foote." I positively writhed in agony. Never had my self respect suffered such humiliation

A BABY PLAYING WITH A BLACK STRAP.—A Lehigh county man and woman went to the hay field the other day, and took their baby along and placed it in the shade. Sometime after the mother noticed the child playing with a black strap, which the little one would every now and then let fall out of the wagon and then crawl out after it, seemingly being very busy with the object it had in possession to amuse itself. Not knowing how it got the strap, she persuaded her husband to go and see what it was.

Imagine the father's horror and terror when on drawing near he found that the child was actually fondling a black snake, at least four feet in length, now wrapped around the little one's body, then entwining itself about its neck and going through all kinds of frightful movements, its red tongue darting out of its mouth with lightning like rapidity and the child all the while stroking it and joyfully laughing until the tears rolled down its cheeks. The snake was killed to the grief of the child

A PROSPEROUS STATE.—The debt of Vermont is only $195,640, while the Treasury contains almost a quarter of a million dollars and is credited with a large amount of uncollected taxes. The current liabilities of the State are only about thirty thousand dollars. Last year $82,500 of the debt was paid. It seems to be possible for Vermont to rid herself of all debt in a year or two, and if things go on in this way it will soon have a surplus fund, the interest on which will pay the cost of government, and taxes be abolished.

The supply of money in our home market is apparently sufficient for the legitimate purposes of trade at [illegible] the usual drafts are yet made there seems a very fair prospect that a reduction will occur before the close of the fall trade. At present however the active demand for funds to [illegible] the grain crop precludes the hope of an immediate decline in rates for the use of money. This demand is now being felt and owing to the probability of an increased supply of ocean tonnage will be more extensive than was anticipated a few weeks ago. It will however be met with some favor and [illegible] supplies will [illegible] the call.

We are advised by our latest eastern exchanges of a continuance of the easy condition of finances on the Atlantic seaboard. Then in the a few days in the latter part of [illegible] last an extensive demand from the Western or Mississippi valley States was felt created by the desire to move a large portion of the crops before the winter closes the natural channels of commerce. The full supplies of capital at the various money centers of our country is a feature upon which we could not congratulate ourselves last year but which seems to be an admitted fact this season. For some time last spring the leading mercantile journals in the country deprecated the stringency which they predicted would be felt to the serious embarrassment of the business interests of all classes upon the opening of the fall trade but for some time past we notice much less of these unwelcome forebodings in the journals alluded to and are led to believe that the fear of an actual scarcity as we were undoubtedly afflicted with last fall has grown less or disappeared entirely. This result of affairs is of course not without its effect on the monetary condition of the Pacific coast and there is no reason for doubting that a like revival of the interests of commerce will take place here, which has attended the abundant supply of money at the East. The outlook for trade on this coast is good and especially is the future fraught with much that is encouraging to the agricultural classes. Abundant crops activity in our markets of demand and prospectively a fair chance for facilities for transportation all are at present in their favor, and with a reasonable degree of prudence they may achieve the losses caused by former untoward circumstances and place themselves upon a firm foundation for future operations on a more liberal scale

The Tonnage Question.

While it is impossible to give all the facts in relation to the number of vessels to arrive here in a given period or in the current harvest year just as it is to tell how many could find cargo, were they here it is now generally believed that we shall have a much more adequate supply of [illegible] of grain carrying capacity than was anticipated a few weeks ago. The arrival of two or three [illegible] whose coming had not been heralded through the press because the exporters, to whom such vessels were under charter did not see fit to communicate their business affairs to outsiders has led many to suppose that other ships may be near at hand, or at least on their way here, of which no report has been made. This conclusion is one which cannot be certain under any circumstances, it may be correct, or it may not. But, taking all the reports into consideration we may safely conclude that the prospect of a good ly number of vessels reaching here during the next ten months is better than it appeared to be a few months ago. In the first place, the European people want the surplus grain of this country their supply being shorter on account of a reduced yield at home secondly the high rates which prevailed for charters on this coast last year turned vessels in this direction from all parts of the world, and many of these are now about due at San Francisco thirdly the yield of Wheat in California this year is at least 25 per cent. less than last, and she will not need as many ships to carry her surplus by at least 80 or 100 as she did in 1872 and, finally, the Columbia river bar, which was successfully crossed by twenty-seven grain-laden vessels, has lost its terrors to navigators. At present we have in port the Wetterhorn the Otago and Privateer the Windermere expected and the Vesta also due. The presence of the same number of vessels at once may not occur again for some time and the fact of their presence may be the reason for the present excited condition of our Wheat market as it is expensive to exporters to have chartered ships lie idle in port.

Diversified Industry.

"We have often heard and read of the great necessity of a diversification of our industries, until a bite [illegible] of our market is wheat, next year this product may be a drug owing to a combination of circumstances now unforeseen. Then the diversification hinted at would be apparent. From the last census reports it appears," says the San Francisco Commercial Herald "that one out of every five of the inhabitants in the Western and Northwestern States is engaged in agriculture and their operations in that line are limited to the production of two articles—namely maize and wheat. There is no lack of breadstuffs in those States. Everybody has got enough and plenty to spare, but they have little else, produced by themselves. They are dependent on New England and the Atlantic States for their clothing, boots and shoes, hats and almost everything they need outside of bread although possessing abundance of the raw material. They make no efforts at being self sustaining and independent, but stick to their corn and wheat as affording the only field for enterprise.

In 1869, the value of sugar and molasses imported into the United States exceeded the value of breadstuffs exported by $84,000,000. No lands are better suited to the raising of sugar beets than those of the Western and Northwestern States yet this great industry is quite neglected and the farmers cannot sell enough wheat and corn to pay for their sweetening, because of high railroad freights. Flax, hemp and many other products of daily consumption are neglected to a great extent. If extreme Western farmers are anxious for the lowest possible range in freight rates those of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the New England States must naturally [illegible] to ward off Western competition. The plain fact is that the farmers in those districts do not engage in a sufficient variety of productions which may be readily effected both in agriculture and manufacture, and are therefore dependent on others, while they have the power to be quite otherwise. We are not too sure that the same charge is not applicable to California. But we are making progress in the right direction

SMALL POX.

DOCTOR BORZFAL'S SMALL POX REMEDY. SAMUEL KORWIN Proprietor can be procured at all the Drug Stores in this city at the present time. As this medicine is proving an inestimable boon to those afflicted with that disease no person should neglect the present opportunity of providing themselves with this valuable antidote
Price ONE DOLLAR per bottle

Portland Oregon Aug 22 187[illegible]

MR SAMUEL KORWIN—Sir. In justice to yourself and for the benefit of those who may be afflicted with the small pox I am induced to give publicity to the following facts. About the 20th of July 18[illegible] I became very unwell having severe pain in my head back and limbs which continued to increase in severity for three or four days, a very high fever set in and I began to break out on my face neck and body with what proved to be small pox. I procured of Dr Frecland of the Central Drug Store a bottle of your small pox remedy. Notwithstanding the severity of the attack I administered the medicine myself mostly in accordance with accompanying directions but in about double doses. In three days all pain and fever disappeared. My recovery was extremely rapid notwithstanding frequent exposures by moving about from place to place while in a high fever which is generally considered fatal in that disease and it is my firm conviction that under the ordinary treatment for that disease I would not be living to-day. I took of the medicine about two and a half bottles more perhaps than was necessary not wishing to discontinue until a thorough cure was effected
